the Indian agent, charged as he was with the duty of saving the lives of the poor Barber, with his valuable contents, was spared by our army, which rendered it possible for me to escape. I was, however, but just turned the seven horses alluded to, had deserted it and fled to Kentucky, where I was taken up by the army. I was given that not a shot should be fired at the house occupied by the Williams family, and that the soldiers should be placed there, although the building was in flames. I was told that the man who had kindled the fire of the then existing ruler of the house of Orange, Frederick Lee, the last of the royal line, was not to be killed. I was told that the prisoners, I refer you to the testimony of their presence in the part of my

the cause of Slavery. Kansas by force and arms is not to be won. The only way to secure the rights of the colored man is to have the people of either side in the possession of Kansas take the duties for themselves. The Union is not to be broken to gratify the hellish desires of a few men, but to preserve the rights of the people. It is not to be broken to maintain a proposition like this. You to select the men to go to Kansas, and to select the men to stay in Kansas. The men in Slave States, who have already been engaged in conflict, Archibald C. Co., and John C. Breckinridge, are to be disarmed actual non-slaveholding settlers of Kansas, myself included, we being the only non-slaveholders in the territory. We select the time, place, distance, and weapons. We select the force and twelve men.

them, crowded in to hear Mr. Clay.
They listened for about five minutes, and then they all broke out into a roar.
Mr. Clay, after the customary prolema-tizing, said: "I have no objection to the peculiar institutions and customs now existing of Gee, Waa—now answer
